JOHN NEWKIRK LOCEY

1801       -       1863

b-3

JOHN NEWKIRK LOCEY, the third child of Daniel and Hester Taylor Locey, was born about the year 1801, near Bloomingburg, Sullivan County New York.

A century of time has dimmed the tragic story of "Uncle Jud". A niece who doubtless knew him in Grant County, Wisconsin, told the brief story nearly fifty years after his death:

John Newkirk Locey was married and lived in Ohio. There was a tragedy. His wife was unfaithful. There were no children so he left her and came to Illinois and Wisconsin. He died in Wisconsin about 1863, aged 64. He never owned up to his relatives that he had been married. His whole life was changed and blighted.

"All was ended now, the hope, and the fear, and the sorrow".

The 1938 Locey Family History

b-IV (6)

This is a tragic and not uncommon record of pioneer life in Illinois, Wisconsin, California, and Oregon. Five children were born to Dr. Alexander R. Thompson Locey and his wife. One son died in infancy, one son died in an accident on the Willamette River, and one daughter died in childbirth. The two surviving children, Sarah Cornelia Locey Hatch and Cyrus T. Locey have carried on the family lines with large families of children and grandchildren, many of them outstanding in ability, training, and accomplishment.
